This text deals with ...

1) the country's geography.
2) the country's climate.
3) the country's history.
4) the country's transport.
5) the country today.
6) the country's national food.

A. India is a country in South Asia and is the second most populated country in the world. It is located on the Indian subcontinent. To the north-east lie the Himalayas, a mountain range that separates the Indian subcontinent from the Tibetan Plateau in western China. To the north-west lies the Thar Desert, sometimes called the Great Indian Desert.

B. India is known for its hot weather. This is because India is strongly influenced by the Himalayas and the Thar Desert. They control the flow of the summer and winter monsoons. The mountains stop the cold northern winds coming in from Central Asia. As a result, winters in India are a lot warmer than in other countries in similar geographic locations.

C. Indian cuisine varies greatly depending on the region. Historically India has developed a wide variety of traditional regional food. During the time of the British rule over India, the British Empire acquired knowledge of Indian cuisine. As a result, the UK now considers Indian food part of its national cuisine, producing many Anglo-Indian dishes.

D. In 3000 BC the area was home to the ancient Indus River Valley Civilization. Later it was home to Aryan Civilization that migrated from the north and formed the basis of Indian culture and religion — Hinduism. In the 13th century most of India fell to the Delhi Sultanate and remained an officially Muslim state until the 18th century, when it came under British control.

E. In 1950 India created its constitution, which put in place a democratic and secular republic. Since the 1990s India has flourished, created a large urban middle class and become one of the world's fastest growing economies. Its culture, movies, music and religion have become more prominent and influential in global culture.

Now we are ready to start.

Father. Guess what is going to happen in 2 weeks, Penny!

Penny. In two weeks? Christmas will be in three weeks, Daddy!

Father. I know. But that's not what I mean. And I don't mean winter holidays, either.

Penny. Oh! Do you mean my birthday?

Father. Of course. So how would you like to celebrate it?

Penny. I don't know. But I would really like to invite my friends.

Father. All right. So, we can invite them here or somewhere else, like a children's cafe or a water park.

Penny. Wow! A waterpark would be great! I love swimming! But I don't think either Amanda or Jennifer can swim.

Father. That's true. So what would you like?

Penny. I would like to invite them to our home.

Father. Good idea. Mummy can make her special birthday cake.

Penny. Yes! I love it! And after the party we could all play board games.
